Italian Hostages Released

BAGHDAD, IRAQ | Kidnappers released two female Italian aid workers and five other hostages Tuesday, raising hopes for at least 18 foreigners still in captivity. But insurgents showed no sign of easing their blood-soaked campaign against the U.S. presence in Iraq, staging a show of defiance in Samarra and striking twice with deadly force in Basra.

It was unclear what prompted the two separate groups of kidnappers to release the Italians, three Egyptians and two Iraqis, and whether any ransom had been paid. It was the second day in a row that foreigners were freed.

Pari and Torretta, both 29, were abducted Sept. 7 in a bold raid on the Baghdad office of their aid agency "Un Ponte Per ..."

("A Bridge To ..."). Two Iraqis, Raad Ali Aziz and Mahnaz Bassam, were also seized; they too were released Tuesday.

The Kuwaiti newspaper Al-Rai al-Aam had reported Tuesday that Pari and Torretta could be released by Friday in return for a $1 million ransom. But Al-Arabiya TV, citing unidentified sources involved in the negotiations, said no ransom was paid.

Four Egyptian telecommunications workers abducted last week were also freed, their parent company, Orascom, announced in Cairo. One of the Egyptians was released Monday and the rest on Tuesday, said the company. Two other Egyptian employees remain in captivity. ALEXANDRA ZAVIS (AP)

Angelos Near Deal On Expos

Orioles owner would allow D.C. team with stipulations

BALTIMORE | Major League Baseball and Baltimore Orioles owner Peter G. Angelos on Tuesday appeared to be inching closer to an agreement on a financial package that, if finalized, would pave the way for the relocation of the Montreal Expos to Washington.

Angelos said following a six-hour meeting with Baseball President Robert A. DuPuy at Angelos' Baltimore law offices that more negotiations were necessary before a deal could be finalized.

"It's a work in progress but no conclusions have been reached at this time," Angelos said Tuesday night, after the meeting. "Additional meetings are planned this week."

Said DuPuy: "We had a very constructive dialogue and explored a number of areas of concern on his part, consistent with his desire to protect the franchise and protect the Baltimore community. No agreement was reached, but a number of ideas were offered for consideration."

The proposal calls for the Orioles' participation in a regional sports network together with the D.C. team; for baseball to make up for any revenue shortfall the Orioles might suffer because of the new team; and for baseball to also guarantee the Orioles' value will not decline below a certain level in the event of a sale. Baseball would make up the difference, according to people familiar with the agreement. THOMAS HEATH (THE WASHINGTON POST)

NURSING HOMES

Today's Activity: Run

A baby bear stunned residents of a nursing home in western Japan Tuesday when it broke through the front door and stormed through the facility, police said. The 3-foot-tall bear broke through a glass door at the Jorakuen elderly home in the town of Kamiichi, Japan, a Toyama police spokesman said. The bear, weighing about 110 pounds, roamed inside the home, crushing plastic doors leading into the residents' rooms before leaving, the police spokesman said. Police and local hunters were searching for the young bear. There were no injuries to the staff or occupants of the home. (AP)

Lock Up Pet Rabbits

Some tenants in a Bay St. Louis, Miss., apartment complex and nearby neighbors are staying with friends or family until Baby, a 17-foot-long Burmese python, is found. Keith Berg said he called police after the 110-pound snake went missing on Thursday. Baby, an 11-year-old python, has lived with Keith Berg for about five years. He said the snake is docile and easy to handle. The snake should not be hungry again for another three weeks, he said. The female python, brown and gold with black streaks, eats four rabbits once a month, but the rabbits are killed before they are fed to her. (AP)

Justice Dept. to Appeal 'Partial-Birth' Ban Ruling

The Justice Department said Tuesday that it will appeal a Nebraska judge's ruling striking down the Partial-Birth Abortion Ban Act. The government said it will challenge the ruling on both counts. (AP) Earthquake Rattles Calif.

Strong tremor shakes large stretch of state, no injuries reported

PARKFIELD, CALIF. | A strong earthquake shook the state Tuesday from Los Angeles to San Francisco, cracking pipes, breaking bottles of wine and knocking pictures from walls.

There were no immediate reports of any injuries from the 6.0-magnitude quake and its more than 160 aftershocks.

The quake was centered near Parkfield, a town of 37 people known as California's earthquake capital. The town is one of the world's most seismically active areas, located on the San Andreas Fault.

"Things were shaking so bad you couldn't tell where to go next," said Parkfield Vineyard owner Harry Miller. "Trees shaking like brooms, and dust coming from everywhere."

The quake tipped over about 300 cases of his wine, and five or six of Miller's buildings were damaged.

The quake struck at 10:15 a.m. and was felt along a 350-mile stretch, as far north as Sacramento and as far south as Santa Ana, southeast of Los Angeles.

A magnitude-6 quake can cause severe damage, though any problems are generally far less severe in remote areas and places like California with strong building codes. MATTHEW FORDAHL (AP)

Lindh Asks For Shorter Sentence

'American Taliban' seeks reduced jail time after Hamdi's release

SAN FRANCISCO | John Walker Lindh asked President Bush on Tuesday to commute his 20-year prison sentence for aiding the Taliban.

His lawyer, James Brosnahan, said that Lindh was fighting alongside the Taliban in a civil war against the Northern Alliance, that he is not a terrorist and that he never fought against U.S. troops.

Brosnahan said the sentence should be reduced because Yaser Esam Hamdi, another American citizen captured in Afghanistan on suspicion of aiding the Taliban, is being released after being held for three years as an enemy combatant.

Justice Department spokesman Mark Corallo, while not commenting directly on the merits of Lindh's request, pointed out that Lindh "pleaded guilty to supporting the Taliban with his lawyers standing beside him."

Lindh, a 23-year-old California native, pleaded guilty in 2002 in civilian court to supplying services to the Taliban and carrying explosives for them. DAVID KRAVETS (AP)

MOJAVE, CALIF. | A test pilot in a stubby rocket plane will try to climb more than 60 miles over the Mojave Desert and punch through the atmosphere Wednesday in the first stage of a quest to win a $10 million prize meant to encourage space tourism.

SpaceShipOne, which in June became the first private, manned craft to reach space, was to make two attempts to rocket through the atmosphere in six days, less than half the 14-day span allowed under Ansari X Prize rules. The second flight is set for Oct. 4.

Created by maverick aerospace designer Burt Rutan and funded by Microsoft billionaire Paul G. Allen, Aviation designer Burt Rutan, seen here at a July news conference, is set to launch another space flight Wednesday.

SpaceShipOne is poised to take the prize sought by more than two dozen teams around the world.

Its closest competitor, a Canadian team with a balloon-launched rocket, scheduled a flight for Oct. 2 but then postponed. (AP)

Blair: Iraq WMD Evidence 'Wrong'

But he won't apologize for removing Saddam, he tells Labor Party

BRIGHTON, ENGLAND | Prime Minister Tony Blair, skirting a direct apology, acknowledged to his Labor Party Tuesday that intelligence used to justify the invasion of Iraq was wrong, but insisted the world was safer with Saddam Hussein in prison.

In a rousing address to the party's annual conference, interrupted twice by delegates booing and heckling, Blair defended the war and said Labor members must believe he backed the U.S.-led campaign in Iraq to protect Britain.

"The evidence about Saddam having actual biological and chemical weapons, as opposed to the capability to develop them, has turned out to be wrong. I acknowledge that and accept it," said Blair, whose primary reason for backing the U.S.-led war was the threat posed by those weapons.

"And the problem is, I can apologize for the information that turned out to be wrong, but I can't, sincerely at least, apologize for removing Saddam. The world is a better place with Saddam in prison."

Blair

Although intended as a springboard for elections, the five-day conference has been eclipsed by the kidnapping of Briton Kenneth Bigley in Baghdad and the continuing bloodshed in Iraq.

The war has eroded public faith in Blair. His personal ratings have sunk and some Labor delegates believe he has neglected bread-and-butter issues such as schools and hospitals.

Still, Blair said he wanted to confront the contentious issue of Iraq head on.

"I know this issue has divided the country. I entirely understand why many disagree," Blair said. He called on Britain to "unite in our determination to stand by the Iraqi people until the job is done."

Blair said the 100-year-old Labor Party had never won three successive terms in power.

"It is worth the fight. Now let's get out and do it," Blair said in the address, which earned him a lengthy standing ovation. ED JOHNSON (AP)

Chechens suspected in shooting death of journalist in Moscow

MOSCOW | Two Chechen men suspected of taking part in the murder of American journalist Paul Klebnikov have been arrested, police said Tuesday.

Three guns were seized from the men, and preliminary findings indicated that one of the weapons might have been used in the July 9 murder of Klebnikov, the editor of Forbes magazine's Russian edition, police chief Vladimir Pronin told the Interfax news agency.

Klebnikov was gunned down outside the magazine's office in downtown Moscow. Speculation on the motive has focused on Klebnikov's writing about the Russian business world. But some commentators have said a Chechen link was also possible, pointing to Klebnikov's book, "Conversations With a Barbarian," that cast top Chechen rebels in a sharply negative light. VLADIMIR ISACHENKOV (AP)

Oil Dispute Brewing In Nigeria

Militia's leader says fighters will soon target foreign workers

LAGOS, NIGERIA | Militiamen trying to wrest control of the oil-rich Niger Delta threatened on Tuesday to launch a "full-scale armed struggle" on petroleum-pumping operations in Africa's largest crude oil producing nation.

Major oil companies played down the warnings, saying they won't seriously affect exports. The threats, nevertheless, helped push world oil prices to historic highs of $50 per barrel Tuesday.

"Any part of Nigeria, wherever we have the opportunity to strike any target, we will strike," said militia leader Moujahid Dokubo-Asari.

He said foreign workers will be considered targets as of Oct. 1 — the 44th anniversary of Nigeria's independence from Britain.

Dokubo-Asari claims to be fighting for self-determination in the region and greater control over oil resources for 8 million Ijaws, the dominant tribe in the southern delta region, which accounts for most of the daily oil exports. (AP)

Hamas Poised to Challenge Arafat

RAMALLAH, WEST BANK | Palestinians marked the fourth anniversary of their uprising Tuesday amid signs that the extremist Hamas group is preparing a political challenge to Yasser Arafat.

Hamas published newspaper ads urging supporters to vote in upcoming municipal elections, saying "it's time for change." And a top Hamas leader indicated the group might try to unseat Arafat in presidential elections, which have not yet been scheduled.

A strong Hamas campaign could pose a formidable challenge to Arafat. The veteran Palestinian leader consented this month to hold municipal elections in response to widespread discontent over his corruption-plagued government.

Arafat has long resisted elections, saying Israeli military occupation of the West Bank and Gaza Strip make orderly voting impossible. But critics accuse him of making excuses to avoid facing an electoral test of the growing dissatisfaction with his rule. (AP)

Panel Keeps D.C. Casino Off Ballot

Three members of appeals court uphold ruling against proposal

WASHINGTON | Opponents of a casino planned for Northeast Washington won a big victory Tuesday. A three-member D.C. Court of Appeals panel upheld the city election board's decision to toss the casino initiative off November's ballot.

Supporters wanted to put more than 3,000 video lottery terminals in a facility to be built in a rundown section of the city, about three miles northeast of the U.S. Capitol.

Following a series of public hearings, the D.C. Board of Elections and Ethics ruled Aug. 5 that the methods used to collect the signatures and promote the initiative violated local regulations.

Repeated calls to proponents of the initiative were not returned. According to a spokesman for the election board, ballots for the Nov. 2 general election were submitted for printing Tuesday.

The appeals panel's ruling is subject to review by the entire nine-member D.C. Court of Appeals. If five members vote to overturn it, proponents could seek an order authorizing reprinting of the ballots. DERRILL HOLLY (AP)

D.C. Mayor Fights Gun Law Repeal

WASHINGTON | A bill before Congress that would repeal many of the District of Columbia's gun laws was denounced Tuesday by city leaders as dangerous and an assault on home rule.

Mayor Anthony A. Williams called the District of Columbia Personal Protection Act, "an insult to the memory of people who died in our city due to gun violence."

Williams joined Del. Eleanor Holmes Norton, D-D.C., Metropolitan Police Chief Charles H. Ramsey, and school superintendent Clifford B. Janey at a Capitol Hill news conference.

All the speakers said the bill represented a blatant attack on D.C. home rule and the city's ability to determine its own fate.

Later, Norton led the group across Capitol Hill to the offices of House Majority Leader Tom DeLay, R-Texas, to discuss H.R. 3193 and try to prevent a vote, scheduled for Wednesday. They left after about 20 minutes without seeing DeLay. (AP)

Warner: D.C. Deal Sweeter to Baseball

RICHMOND, VA. | Major league baseball is apparently bound for the nation's capital, not its Virginia suburbs, lured there by a richer stadium deal, Gov. Mark R. Warner said Tuesday.

With the District of Columbia offering to finance a new $440 million home for the Montreal Expos, Washington hopes to learn this week that baseball will return to the city after three decades.

Warner said on his monthly call-in show on WTOP radio in Washington that he believed Virginia offered a financially sound package for moving the team to Loudoun County.

"The District's approach is much, much more generous to baseball. The District proposal does not put nearly as much of an obligation on baseball" as the Virginia plan, Warner said. (AP)

Metro Reviews Transit Officers' Techniques

WASHINGTON | The head of Metro Transit Police said Tuesday the department is reviewing techniques that could be provided to help officers "deal more effectively with difficult people" as they enforce the sometimes minor violations of increasingly frustrated riders.

Police Chief Polly Hanson said skills such as verbal persuasion may help officers convince riders to comply with the rules — which, for some, could mean a warning or ticket instead of handcuffs.

Her comments, first reported by WTOP radio, followed reports of the Sept. 9 arrest of a pregnant woman for allegedly cursing loudly into a cell phone and being uncooperative with police.

Is the Air in Your Home Making You Sick?

Your duct system functions as the respiratory system of your home. When it becomes contaminated and congested, it should be cleaned so it can 'breathe' normally and efficiently.

If you answer YES to any of the following questions, it may be time to have your air duct system professionally cleaned.

- ◆ Does anyone in the house have allergies, asthma, or other respiratory problems?
- ◆ Does anyone in your family suffer from headaches, nasal congestion, or other sinus problems at night or in the morning?
- ◆ Is there a smoker in the house?
- ◆ Do you have dogs, cats or other pets?
- ◆ Do you notice "musty" or "stale" odors when the furnace or air conditioner runs?
- ◆ Do you notice dust on your furniture shortly after cleaning?
- ◆ Does it seem like there is not enough air flow coming from your vents?
- ◆ Is your furnace equipped only with a standard throwaway fiberglass filter?

Delta Employees to Face 10% Pay Cut

ATLANTA | Delta Air Lines' chief executive said Tuesday he is declining his six-figure salary for the rest of the year as he announced a 10 percent pay cut for executives, ticket and gate agents, and other staff. CEO Gerald Grinstein also said in a memo to employees that the nation's third-largest airline will cut retirement benefits and increase employee contributions to health insurance as part of its plan to avoid bankruptcy. "It is in everyone's best interest that we protect Delta's future by taking these steps together," he wrote.

Delta would not immediately say how much salary Grinstein is relinquishing. His predecessor, Leo Mullin, earned about $500,000 a year. The airline has lost more than $5 billion since 2001 and has racked up $20 billion in debt as it has faced higher fuel prices and increased competition from low-fare carriers. HARRY R. WEBER (AP)

Price of Oil Surges Past $50 a Barrel

Settles at $49.90 as worries mount about output in Iraq, Nigeria

WASHINGTON | Crude oil surpassed $50 a barrel for the first time and analysts said Tuesday that prices could keep rising because of a sharp rise in global demand, tight supplies and threats to output in petroleum-producing nations such as Iraq and Nigeria.

Light crude rose 26 cents to $49.90 to a new settlement high on the New York Mercantile Exchange after trading as high as $50.20 earlier in the day.

On Tuesday, Saudi Arabia pledged to boost the limits of its daily oil production by a half-million barrels, but the move failed to calm markets since actual supplies may not be added anytime soon.

Adjusting for inflation, today's prices are still about $30 a barrel below the level reached in 1981 after the Iranian revolution. Even so, the United States is on pace to spend an extra $68 billion on oil this year, 30 percent more than last year.

Underpinning today's high oil prices is the fact that the world's supply buffer, or excess capacity, is just 1 percent of daily global demand of 82 million barrels. That leaves the industry little breathing room in the event of a prolonged supply interruption.

"We have nothing, really, to fall back on," said Robert Ebel, director of the energy program at the Center for Strategic and International Studies, who believes oil will remain above $40 a barrel into 2005.

Some analysts insist, however, that oil prices are artificially high, with markets rallying on overblown fears, rather than supply-demand fundamentals.

Nevertheless, the 75 percent increase in the price of oil in the past year also promises to heat up as a political issue, with just over a month until the presidential election. BRAD FOSS (AP)

Gibbs Blasts Referees for Bad Calls

'They miss a lot of stuff,' says Redskins coach

REDSKINS | Even a Hall of Fame coach doesn't get a break from the refs.

Washington Redskins coach Joe Gibbs on Tuesday reviewed the tape of the loss to the Dallas Cowboys and pronounced himself on the wrong side of "two awful calls."

"I don't get focused on that stuff. It doesn't do any good to talk about it," Gibbs said. "But I'll tell you this — you couldn't get anything farther from what should have been called in both cases. Both of them were touchdowns; both of them go against us."

Disputable calls that went both ways played a significant part in Dallas' 21-18 victory Monday night.

"You're frustrated. You're mad, and realize that in close games you need to have those things called correctly," Gibbs said. "I've been in it long enough to know that just doesn't happen sometimes, too. They miss a lot of stuff."

Gibbs was particularly unhappy with a first-quarter pass interference call on Walt Harris, who was grabbed first by Dallas receiver Terry Glenn. The 40-yard penalty gave Dallas the ball on the 1-yard line, and the Cowboys scored on the next play.

Then, in the fourth quarter, with Washington trailing 21-10, Rod Gardner just missed chasing down a long pass in the end zone with defensive back Terence Newman trailing.

Gibbs said both plays have been sent to the NFL office for review, the usual procedure for any calls that are questionable.

Despite his comments about the officiating, Gibbs was the first to acknowledge that the Redskins could have won the game simply by making fewer mistakes on offense.

Laveranues Coles dropped three passes in the first quarter, although Gibbs revealed Tuesday that Coles had dislocated a finger early in the game and kept playing.

The Redskins' Walt Harris, right, was called for a questionable pass interference penalty on this play in Monday's loss, which led to one of the Cowboys' touchdowns.

Gibbs went out of his way to defend Mark Brunell, who rallied to make some pinpoint passes in the second half to keep the game close. "It was a heroic effort on his part," Gibbs said. JOSEPH WHITE (AP)

Tony Kornheiser: How do you write a bandwagon column about the Redskins, who are already 0-2 in the NFC East? You most certainly don't! Today's Post, Sports

LIVE ONLINE

NFL Insider

Washington Post staff writer MARK MASKE was online Tuesday to discuss the Washington Redskins 21-18 loss to the Dallas Cowboys on Monday night.

Forget the missed pass interference calls, forget the Joe Gibbs vs. Bill Parcells rivalry and forget the final score. Gibbs' offense seems to be stuck in time and the clock management (or lack of it) was simply awful. If Gibbs were Steve Spurrier or a younger coach, people around the league would be questioning his ability.

You're right that Steve Spurrier would have been absolutely lambasted if he'd messed up some of the things in a game that Gibbs messed up last night with the clock management and the challenge. It certainly is fair to say that he's going through an adjustment period and trying to get comfortable with some of the things that are different for him, like replay and the shorter play clock. His offensive system is sound. That's not the problem.

Do you realistically see Mark Brunell finishing the season as starter even if he's healthy?

There was a reason why Jacksonville was willing to get rid of Brunell, and it wasn't only the ascension of Byron Leftwich. I think it's a major question mark right now as to whether Brunell will be this team's quarterback all season. I wouldn't make a change now. He seemed to settle down during the course of the game Monday night, and by the end he was giving the Cowboys problems. But if the inconsistency continues, this coaching staff will have a decision to make in a few weeks.

What are your thoughts on Laveranues Coles? He shouldn't be dropping those balls.

He has not been the same player since hurting his foot last season. I think the injury is in his head now and affecting his concentration, and leading to the drops. He is not the same player he was in the early stages of last season, but he is still the best receiver on this team and they need to keep him involved in games.

A's Stumble to the Finish

Poor showings leave Oakland fighting to reach the playoffs

BASEBALL | The Oakland Athletics are used to pressure-packed pennant races. It's their sub-par September that's the shocker.

The A's typically rely on a phenomenal final month to wrap up the AL West at the wire — that's why their recent struggles have been so strange.

Oakland, baseball's best team after the All-Star break the past four seasons, was only 11-14 this month following Monday night's 6-5 win over Seattle.

They began play Tuesday with a one-game lead over Anaheim, with six games remaining in their quest to reach the playoffs for the fifth straight season.

The two-time defending division champs had a four-game division lead entering play on Sept. 5, but have gone 8-13 since.

Once a Cy Young contender, Mark Mulder is 0-3 in his last five starts.

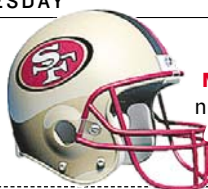

"We're not playing as good, plain and simple," first baseman Scott Hatteberg said.

Mark Mulder, the AL starter in the All-Star Game, certainly hasn't been himself. The left-hander, who at one point was a Cy Young Award candidate, is 0-3 with an 8.10 ERA in five starts this month.

"This time of year, you've got to get the job done," Mulder said.

Fan Sues to Get Historic Baseball

Ownership of Bonds' 700th home-run ball at center of dispute

SOUVENIRS | The San Francisco Giants fan who caught Barry Bonds' 700th homer is being sued by another man who says he was the rightful owner of the prized ball, which he maintains was stolen from him during a mad scramble.

According to a restraining order to be filed in state court Tuesday, Timothy Murphy said Steve Williams stole the historic blast from him during a melee in the left-center field bleachers at SBC Park on Sept. 17.

Williams said in an interview that he did not steal the ball but found it at the bottom of the heap of people.

"We all got in this pile. There were people everywhere," the 26-year-old from Pacifica said. He said he did not kick, punch or accost any-

Bonds became the first new member of the 700 club in 31 years, joining Babe Ruth and Hank Aaron.

MUSTANG RALLY? Ford Motor Co. launched its all-new 2005 Mustang on Monday, the fifth generation of the iconic sports car the company sorely needs to help lift sluggish U.S. sales. (AP)

Powerfully Impractical

Mercedes-Benz fires the next shot in the horsepower wars

VANITY | There is something distinctly epochal about the Mercedes-Benz SL65 AMG, the twin-turbocharged, 12-cylinder, 604-horsepower version of the company's quantum-luxury roadster. More powerful than the Ford GT and quicker than a Ferrari 360, the SL65 — an SL600 with gene-doping enhancement by AMG, the company's tuner division — feels like a final, conflict-ending fusillade in the decade-long horsepower wars.

What comes after a car like this? More horsepower? Don't count on it. While it's certainly possible to wring more horsepower out of an emissions-legal gasoline engine, such pursuits grow increasingly expensive and irrelevant, if not vain and silly. The SL65 is less than a second slower to 60 mph than a 650-horsepower Ferrari Enzo — and that single second, that fig leaf of numerical superiority, costs about a half-million dollars more.

The long-awaited Bugatti Veyron, a million-euro hyper-car built under the auspices of parent company VW Group, promises nearly 1,000 hp out of its quad-turbo W16 engine. But it looks to be a rather feckless enterprise; with its complex drivetrain — seven speeds, multiple differentials and all-wheel drive — the 4,300-pound car will not be quicker than the 3,000-pound Enzo, though if it manages to stay on the ground its top speed will probably be higher.

The horsepower wars are, at base, psychological warfare. It's purely academic if the 400-hp Cadillac CTS-V is faster than the 500-hp BMW M5 — it isn't — since both cars are horridly fast enough. One may indulge pet theories about men and their sexual compensations.

Extreme sports cars justify their ludicrous cost only by a few tenths of a second measured by some car magazine, and yet here the field seems to be reaching a natural equilibrium — they can all make the green-light dash in around 4 seconds; they can all turn a quarter-mile in about 12 seconds; and they can all cruise at 200 mph. The Porsche Carrera GT, Ford GT, Lamborghini Murcielago and a handful of rare isotopes fall into this category. DAN NEIL (L.A. TIMES)

City dwellers turn to car-sharing services for convenience, cost

OPTIONS | Facing rising gas prices, high insurance costs and hefty parking fees, Shana Lehar said she simply couldn't afford to own a car.

Lehar needed an occasional ride to the grocery store or beach. The Seattle resident signed up for a car-sharing program, easy access to a car for a fraction of the cost.

"It just sounded like a really good deal," said Lehar, 23.

Programs such as Flexcar say business is booming as city dwellers look for alternatives.

Flexcar, which operates in more than 20 cities, has seen its membership grow to 22,000, from 16,000 a year ago. Zipcar in Boston said business is up 90 percent in a year, to around 25,000 participants.

Eliot Dobris, spokesman for San Francisco's City CarShare, a non-profit service that has more than 3,000 members, said it's a combination of financial factors that gets people to sign up.

Scott Griffith, chief executive of Zipcar, said many new members cite rising parking fees and insurance costs.

A bad economy can be good for the car-sharing business.

"We tend to be a little bit countercyclical, so as things get worse for consumers they tend to look for alternatives to save money," said Lance Ayrault, chief executive of Flexcar.

Michelle Bourassa, of Kirkland, Wash., sold her car after a divorce and plans to use Flexcar for doctor's appointments and to get her daughter to school. ALLISON LINN (AP)

Speaking Up

Voice-over actors and actors who do voices are at last being heard

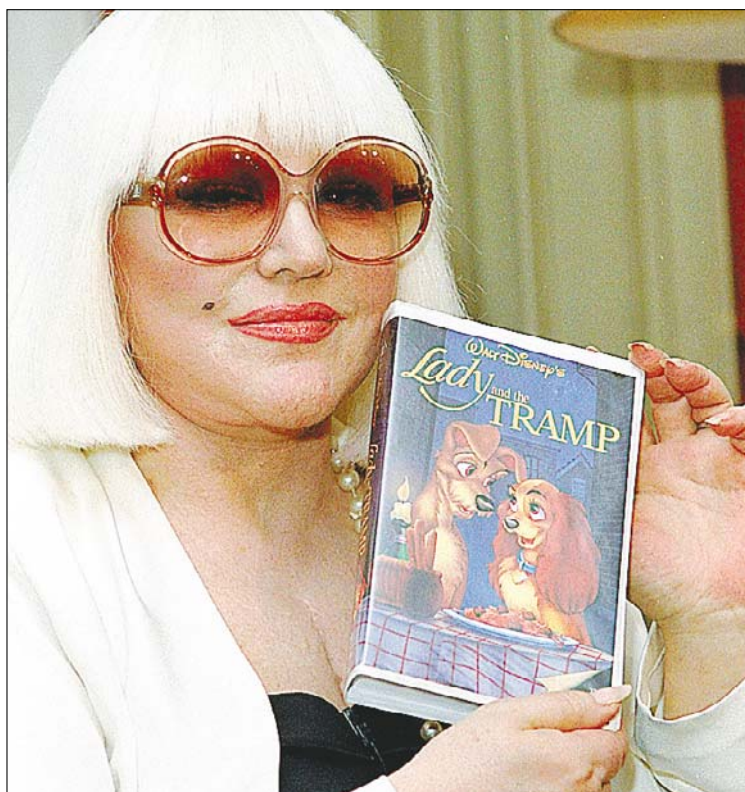

GETTING PAID | Quick! Who did the voice of Snow White. Cinderella? How about the Little Mermaid? It's OK if the names Adriana Caselotti, Ilene Woods and Jodi Benson don't immediately spring to mind.

But now try naming the actors who voiced Shrek, the Genie from "Aladdin" or Woody the cowboy from "Toy Story," and it's easy to think of Mike Myers, Robin Williams and Tom Hanks.

Performing animation was not considered prestige work decades ago, but those three performances have changed things. Now, practically every cartoon features famous voices.

The new undersea gangster comedy "Shark Tale" has a slew of them. The computer-animated story of a scared little fish (Will Smith) who becomes famous as a "shark slayer" features the voices of no fewer than 12 famed actors, from Jack Black and Robert De Niro to Renee Zellweger and Katie Couric.

Decades ago, Walt Disney barred Caselotti from making any public appearances. He didn't want viewers to put a face to Snow White's voice. Caselotti, who died in 1997 at 80, often said she deserved more, but never sued for it.

The change came about, in part, thanks to Peggy Lee, one of the rare celebrity voices to do a cartoon years ago. She successfully sued Disney for more money after the videocassette success of 1955's "Lady and the Tramp."

Studios now find that a star is one more attraction for audiences. Among the advantages for actors, said Jack Black, "You don't have to worry about the other actor getting impatient. Then I trust the editors to cut together awesome conversations ... so it really sounds like we're talking to each other."

DreamWorks Animation, which produced "Shark Tale," has been generous with its stars in the past. Myers, Cameron Diaz and Eddie Murphy each reportedly received $10 million upfront for "Shrek 2" and a percentage of the profits.

Meanwhile, a cartoon voice can give actors a place in movie history for generations of kids — and they don't even have to shave.

"For the talent, the voice-over work is a minimal commitment," said Eric Wight, an artist who has worked on cartoons for "Buffy the Vampire Slayer" and "Charlie's Angels." "I always love being at these voice-recording sessions and they show up and they're practically in their pajamas and unwashed."

Keb' Mo's Protest Blues

An earnest new take breathes life into activist rock songs

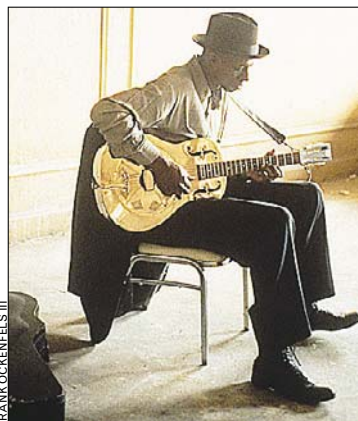

MUSIC | When Bob Dylan sang "The times, they are a-changin'" so many years ago, those words became ingrained in American music's pantheon, as a kid from Minnesota sang in response to daily news of deaths in a faraway land.

Sound familiar? It does to Keb' Mo', whose style of country-oriented blues harkens back to legends like Robert Johnson, but deftly blends

R&B and clarity into it.

The 52-year-old musician gathered nine protest standards from the 1960s and 1970s, updating them for contemporary times and adding his mellifluous standards, to draw attention to the lack of peace worldwide.

The nearly 40-minute "Peace ... Back by Popular Demand" (OKEH/Epic) features covers of Buffalo Springfield's "For What It's Worth," Dylan's "The Times They Are A-Changing" and Marvin Gaye's "What's Happening, Brother?" among others.

POLITICS AND PEACE: Keb' Mo' wants to teach a new generation old lessons.

All are laid-back interpretations, mostly true to the original form, with the lyrics tweaked here and there. More importantly, all of them resonate with earnestness and a desire to bring people together despite their political leanings.

It's an ambitious effort for any artist and Keb' Mo' pulls it off.

The songs are catchy and the music is his trademark fashion. Hearing him use a country-tinged, gospel-inspired intro to "(What's So Funny 'Bout) Peace, Love and Understanding" — the Nick Lowe song made famous by Elvis Costello and the Attractions — gives it deeper meaning and impact.

And that's what this album is designed to do.

Ramones rock on with a new DVD of music and movies

DVD | For months, Johnny Ramone had been working on the band's first official DVD, even as he neared the end of a five-year battle with prostate cancer.

Now "Ramones Raw" comes out less than two weeks after the guitarist's death. It's a retrospective of the career of one of rock's most influential groups, culled mostly from home movies the band shot between 1979 and 1996.

Johnny Ramone (the surname is not original to any of the band's members), who died Sept. 15, is the third original member of the New York punk quartet to pass on, leaving only drummer Tommy Ramone. Singer Joey and bassist Dee Dee died previously; later members

Four guys, three chords: The Ramones' music added a spark to angry punk.

Marky and C.J. are still alive.

"Ramones Raw" has all the illicit thrills, blurry focus and jumpy camera joy of a bootleg video, albeit one made by the band itself.

It's a fitting, fast-paced, funny retrospective on the lovable lunkheads' career, narrated by the guys themselves as they goof on security trying to clear a path through a throng of fans ("What do these kids want?" one asks. "Our limbs," replies another), tease each other about the girls they were with last night and generally look bored.

Many of the live cuts are seen here for the first time, including vintage 1980 footage from Rome's Castle St. Angelo, starting, of course, with the classic "Blitzkrieg Bop" and its "Hey, Ho! Let's Go!" intro. From then it's right into "Teenage Lobotomy," which has one of rock's best-ever rhymes in "Now I guess I'll have to tell 'em / That I got no cerebellum."

The stripped-down power of The Ramones shines through as they remake rock 'n' roll with three chords and four black leather jackets. Together, they put a funny face on the threatening, angry punk movement, making it more accessible to mainstream rock fans who quickly took to their buzz-saw guitar, throbbing bass and simple-yet-steady drum beats. YOU'RE NOT MY MOTHER: Jodi Spolansky, left, with her faux family. Manhattanite Spolansky started out whining but ended up winning over Brad and his two girls.

Take My Wife, Stranger, Please

Opposites contrast in the households of ABC's 'Wife Swap'

REALITY | The differences are huge, and "Wife Swap" makes the most of them.

On the official premiere of "Wife Swap" (tonight at 10 p.m.), we meet Jodi Spolansky, a multi-millionaire heiress with a businessman husband, three children and a pampered lifestyle, who trades lives for two weeks with Lynn Bradley, a schoolbus driver from rural New Jersey with a lazy husband and two teenage daughters.

Spolansky knew she was setting herself up as a stereotype.

"In the beginning, I come across as this spoiled Manhattan woman who does nothing but eat lunch and go to the gym," she said. "But by the end, I showed everybody that I wasn't just that."

The villain of the tale is her husband, seen as a selfish alpha male who makes houseguest Lynn cry.

"He's really the nicest guy and the best father!" Jodi said. "But he speaks his mind."

Maybe so. But "Wife Swap" isn't the first reality show to, um, enhance the truth for the sake of storytelling.

And rather than wallow in its arranged culture clash, the episode moves toward an uplifting moral: We're all more the same than it may seem on the surface.

At the modest Bradley home, Jodi panics at the prospect of cooking for her surrogate family. And she butts heads with mulish Brad, who expects her to assume his wife Lynn's other duties, which include cutting firewood for sale.

But they eventually make their peace. "I told him, 'This is a TV show, and we can argue the whole time and look like idiots. Or you and I can try to get along, and understand one another as human beings.' And that's what we did."

By the end of the hour, everybody parts friends (and have stayed in touch since the episode was taped last winter).

Even better, Brad learned some lasting lessons: The pain of his wife's absence, and, under Jodi's tutelage, how to be a more supportive husband. Lynn reported that since the show, "he participates more in the chores around the house. It worked out real well for me."

Thinking Aloud

Singer Steve Earle uses his music to motivate the masses

AGITROCK | Steve Earle is an unapologetic leftist who'd like nothing more than to see President Bush defeated in November. So what would people who disagree with his politics get from Earle's new CD, "The Revolution Starts... Now," other than elevated blood pressure?

Actually, they might get fired up, too. For his disc's overriding theme is less about speaking up against Bush than speaking up in general.

"I don't hold 'them' responsible for the fact that the country is not going the way that I think it ought to go," he said. "I hold us — the people who think like I do — responsible. Democracy, it's hard work. It requires vigilance."

Through his songs and activism, Earle has campaigned against the death penalty for years. He's ratcheted up other topical content and earned the enmity of many with "John Walker's Blues," a song about the American who joined the Taliban in Afghanistan.

On "Revolution," Earle writes about characters whose lives are affected by the decisions of others. There's a truck driver from Houston driving a rig in Iraq, a young man who joined the Army to see the world, a soldier in PEACENIK: Earle is used to riling folks up with his politically charged music.

Afghanistan whose car was being repossessed back home, a youth in Gaza strapped with a bomb.

Earle even sings about his desire to seduce National Security Adviser Condoleezza Rice. "I think she's kind of hot," he said. "Her very existence fascinates me."

He and Rice are the same age, he explained, and he often wonders how she wound up with views diametrically opposed not only to himself, but to the majority of black Americans.

Can music make a political difference? Earle believes so. "Don't try to tell me that songs don't change people's hearts or minds about things," he said. "They do that, they get you girls — it's a very powerful medium."

SPONGEBOB, SUPERSTAR: Nickelodeon has partnered with BMG to create a record label; tunes from Nick's shows would be released as albums. As if SpongeBob, Dora the Explorer and the Rugrats aren't entertaining enough.

Bringing Up Daddy

Taye Diggs learns and loves in UPN's painless 'Kevin Hill'

DEBUT | Proof that some ideas never die can be found in the new series "Kevin Hill" (9 p.m., UPN).

Taye Diggs stars in the title role as a brash and handsome young lawyer who changes female lovers as often as some of us change socks. But that all changes when his troubled cousin dies and leaves Kevin, his only relative, with a 10-month-old bundle of joy named Sarah.

Now it would be easy to dismiss "Kevin" out of hand as unoriginal. But the show rises above its contrivances to comment on contemporary gender roles. Once Kevin becomes a daddy, he stops thinking of women as disposable items. When his hotshot partners feel threatened by Kevin's new priorities and try to ease his workload, he quits and joins an all-female legal team.

And just to underscore Kevin's new sensitivities, his first case with the firm involves a woman who claims that a popular jock molested her in a crowded bar.

In addition to providing eye-candy for female viewers, Taye Diggs grounds this often farfetched drama with a consistently believable performance. KEVIN McDONOUGH (UNITED FEATURE SYNDICATE)

ON TV TONIGHT

I BELIEVE I CAN FLY: Or not, in the case of this soon-to-be mythbusted vehicle.

IT BLOWS UP GOOD MYTHBUSTERS (9 p.m., Discovery) is an entertainingly geeky series that explodes myths and popular assumptions. Hosts Adam Savage and Jamie Hyneman display an infectious love of science, can-do spirit and a boyish enthusiasm for blowing things up.

JUST BUILD A BOAT, GUYS LOST (8 p.m., ABC) A radio signal buoys hopes.

THEY CAN'T MESS UP ANY WORSE THAN ROCCO DID Restaurant management on THE APPRENTICE (9 p.m., NBC).

WE'D KILL FOR THAT DRESS CSI: NEW YORK (10 p.m., CBS) Toe-tag tales in the Naked City.

IS CHLOE DEAD OR WHAT? SMALLVILLE (8 p.m., WB) Clark and Lois team up for a big scoop.

BAD, BAD FLAKS SWEET SMELL OF SUCCESS (8 p.m., Flix) An amoral publicist (Tony Curtis) carries the water for a power-mad Broadway columnist (Burt Lancaster). KEVIN McDONOUGH (UNITED FEATURE SYNDICATE)

Aboriginal cuisine mixes American Indian with European Bison carpaccio and caribou bruschetta are not typical of American Indian home cooking. But Chef and Cree Indian Arnold Olson is trying to transform tribal foods into haute cuisine, cooking traditional ingredients in grand European manner.

"For me to add European style into dishes is a must," Olson, who calls his dishes aboriginal, said. "I really believe in the future of aboriginal foods."

Other cooks also are experimenting with the new cuisine. The Museum of the American Indian's cafe specializes in Indian-style food, a menu the museum calls native. Such chefs strive to keep the menu true to its roots while still familiar enough to entice non-Indians.

Indians historically prepared what was available locally, so there is a wide variety of dishes.

In addition, many aboriginal ingredients have become part of the American culinary standard. People have to be reminded the foods are Indian, said Richard Hetzler, executive chef at the museum cafe.

"People think of tamales as Mexican," Hetzler said. "They think of Latin American food when they are truly products that Indians used to make."

Indigenous Dish

At Tillicum Village, a Northwest Indian-themed dinner theater on a Puget Sound island near downtown Seattle, the cooks bake salmon on stakes of cedar over fires of alder wood, a cooking style "thousands of years old," said Mark Hewitt, the company's president.

But the meal was not a part of the traditional Northwestern

Indian diet.

Small red new potatoes substitute for wild potatoes that the Indians would have eaten, Hewitt said. The dinner also includes rice, "which doesn't have anything to do with anything," he said.

The museum cafe's response is to divide its offerings, food court-style, into five geographic regions.

To bring Indian foods into the mainstream, changes typically have to be made in the recipes.

"There's a lot of comments, especially [from] people who come from the reservations, 'It's like you're copying the white people,'" Olson said.

He believes the techniques are worth copying. IRA DREYFUSS (AP)

'Star Wars' DVD

JEN CHANEY, washingtonpost.com's movies editor and DVD columnist, discusses the pros and cons of the Star Wars Trilogy DVD | washingtonpost.com/liveonline

What would you say is the best part of dishing out the 40-some bucks to get the trilogy on DVD?

The best part for me is that bonus fourth disc. I think it's so well done. I have to sit through a lot of crummy DVD features, but these are organized and executed really well. One thing I will note, however: the "Empire of Dreams" documentary, which is amazing, has aired on cable TV. Granted, it was a truncated version and the one on the DVD is longer and more thorough. But still, I was irritated. That doc should only be viewable on the DVD, otherwise what's the point?

What's the buzz? Will the original, unaltered trilogy ever be released on DVD?

We did a discussion last week with Van Ling, the producer of the "Star Wars" DVD. He doesn't make decisions about which version of the trilogy is released, but he hinted that the originals could come out for the 30th anniversary release in 2007. I'm guessing they'd put out all six "Star Wars" movies together at that point. That's not definite, of course, but I wouldn't be surprised if this occurs.

George Lucas needs to be saved from his own movies. Episode IV was great, minus the new scenes. Episode I was just awful and Episode IV with the Ewoks foretold that Lucas was getting really soft. Is there any chance Episode III will be decent?

I've heard that Episode III will be darker, and that some scenes are worthy of an R-rating. Of course, that's just conjecture at this point. I hope it's better than Episodes I and II, which were pretty pathetic.

VHS vs. DVD: Why should I buy "Star Wars" on DVD when I have it on VHS?

Because DVD is better quality than VHS; even if you're not thrilled about Lucas' revisions, it's still the better experience visually.

On Metro, Noise Is Normal

I WAS DISAPPOINTED but not surprised to read yesterday's letter to the editor about what one reader considers excessive talking on the Metro. I understand her concern, but I am tired of hearing the standard D.C. complaints about how inconsiderate fellow Metro riders are. I was particularly surprised by her need to contact the driver of the train to report one offender. It seems to me that people who can't deal with the conversations or dubious musical talents of their fellow riders — in a public place, no less — should consider alternate modes of transportation. Washingtonians should learn to tolerate the small discomforts that come with moving large groups of people. Maybe they could try closing their eyes and thinking about something nice for a change.

Miffed at MADONNA's Kabbalistic tendencies and her recent visit to Israel, Egyptian lawmakers want to ban her from entering the country, E! Online reported. Members of parliament are asking that she not be allowed onto Egyptian soil, even though she has no plans to visit. The parliament also petitioned Egyptian embassies to deny visa requests to Madonna, who recently adopted the name Esther. Her visit to Israel for the Jewish New Year drew much media attention and required 1,000 police officers to guard herself and the 2,000-person Kabbalah group. (EXPRESS)

Horoscope

By Stella Wilder

- LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)

You may be operating under mistaken notions, but someone will steer you straight. Together, you can work things out well.
- SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)

You will want to associate closely with an Aries or Sagittarius native — one who, simply by chance, has all the answers.
- SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)

You're going to want to scout things out before you proceed; make sure you're avoiding all obstacles that you can foresee.
- CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)

That which seems easiest may actually be the hardest to pull off — and vice versa. It's all a matter of doing what comes naturally.
- AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)

You can capitalize on your own mistakes if you are quick to spot them and assess them correctly. Anything can be fixed.
- PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)

You may have to report the behavior of another to someone in authority, particularly if your own warnings fall on deaf ears.
- ARIES (March 21-April 19)

You may run into someone whose natural stubbornness actually slows you down. Now is no time to fight back in kind; play it cool all day long.
- TAURUS (April 20-May 20)

You're going
- to have a good deal of help as you strive for something you've not accomplished. Give credit where credit is due.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)

A close friend may offer you an intriguing incentive, but you may still have to follow your current path until you reach your destination.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)

An adventure waits for you, but are you truly ready for it? You may have one important lesson yet to learn before the day is out.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)

There is no need for you to hide behind pretense; tell it like it is, and those who don't agree with you can state their case as well.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)

You may be asking a question that simply cannot be answered in any routine manner. Patience, then, is a necessity.

JOIN THE TOUR. MAKE THE PROMISE. FEEL THE HOPE.

Lance Armstrong, cancer survivor
and 2004 Tour of Hope rider

Michael Siegel, cancer survivor
and 2004 Tour of Hope rider

Forty-four-year-old Michael Siegel is living proof that clinical trials of new medicines can save lives. Working with his doctor, he was enrolled as the first patient in a Phase II trial for an investigational drug to combat leukemia. Three months later the leukemia was in remission and four years later he is still cancer free.

Nearly every approach to cancer screening, detection and treatment available today has come from clinical trials. Currently, more than 60 percent of children with cancer are enrolled in clinical trials, and during the past three decades the cure rate for childhood cancer has risen from less than 10 percent to 75 percent as the result of participation in research. Fewer than 5 percent of adults with cancer are enrolled in clinical trials.

Clinical trials are vitally important. That's why, on October 1st, Bristol-Myers Squibb and our partners in the cancer community are coming together to take that message out on the road. It's the Bristol-Myers Squibb Tour of Hope™, an incredible week-long ride across America to raise awareness about cancer and the importance of clinical trials. The team of 20 riders is comprised of survivors such as Michael Siegel, caregivers, advocates, healers and researchers who will ride from Los Angeles to Washington, DC—joined by cancer survivor and six-time Tour de France champion Lance Armstrong, in cities along the way.

Clinical trials— the pathway to new medicines

There are currently hundreds of new cancer treatments waiting to be studied. Sadly, many people are unaware that clinical trials are an option. Patient participation is vital because medications in development may save lives today and offer hope for the future.

Now that you know the importance of clinical trials in the fight against cancer, what can you do? The "Promise" is a personal commitment to learn more about this life-threatening disease. By making the Promise, you can honor those who have been touched by cancer and show your support for the importance of cancer research. Following their journey across America, Lance Armstrong and the Tour of Hope Team will deliver your pledge in Washington, DC on October 9th. Make the Promise; follow the tour at www.tourofhope.org.
